

Dog Treats Made Easy

Dogs have become such valued family members that it is not surprising, when it comes to dog treats, that there are almost as many to choose from as there are treats for us. Many of us enjoy feeding treats to our dog as much as they love to get them. Making your own homemade dog treats can be a healthy way to provide your dog with treats that they will enjoy.

Also, if the recipe calls for the dog treats to be cut out of rolled out dough; many young children will enjoy using cooking cutters to cut out shapes for the homemade dog treats. Younger children can also help you to create homemade dog treats for the family dog. If you have several dogs in your family and are looking to for an affordable alternative to high priced quality dog treats, you may want to investigate creating your own homemade dog treats.

When you are baking your homemade dog treats you have a great deal of flexibility and can include flavor combinations that you know your dog enjoys. Dogs with dull and lifeless coats can benefit immensely from homemade dog treats that are rich in fatty acids. Not only can making your own homemade dog treats be healthier, but they can save you a considerable amount of money, you will know that all of the ingredients are of high quality, and that there is nothing in the treat that could possibly be harmful for your dog.

Overweight dogs - Making your own gourmet dog treats lets you control the ingredients in the product. Natural Treats - Many people, when they read what is in commercial dog treats, are not happy about the fillers and preservatives used so they choose to make or buy gourmet dog treats with only natural ingredients. Always keep your dog's health in mind when purchasing treats, and remember to read the labels carefully.

Keeping the dog treats in airtight containers with lids will keep them safe and secure from the dogs as well. Remember to keep the dog treats in the cupboard for a while, and even though it is hard to ignore a barking dog, it will pay its dividends later on. Your dog will be sure to love these treats, and love you for even more for taking the time to find these home made dog treats recipes.

Homemade dog treats also provide you with the opportunity to increase your dogs protein intake. Store bought dog treats can be very expensive and do not always provide the highest quality of nutritional content. Edible dog treats should be high in vitamins and nutrients and low in fat.

A pocket full of dog treats can be used while training a dog to heel, sit, stay, or any other such command. Be sure to have a pocket full of dog treats when teaching your dog how to sit, stay, heel, or perform other similar commands. When you think of dog treats you are probably thinking of doggie bones and snacks.

Instead, you want your dog to think of you as the "strong master," or the "BIG DADDY" over him, so that he obeys you because you're the master and because he wants to please you, not just because you have a treat. In addition to the monetary reasons to create your own homemade dog treats and vittles, these treats can also be a better nutritional value for your pet.
